

Opening Doors:

A conversation with Dr. Frederick H. Lovejoy, Jr.

For more than six decades, Dr. Frederick H. Lovejoy, Jr. has been a leader in academic pediatrics, medical toxicology, and medical education. The William Berenberg Distinguished Professor of Pediatrics at Harvard Medical School and Associate Physician-in-Chief and Deputy Chairman Emeritus of the Department of Pediatrics at Boston Children's Hospital, Dr. Lovejoy has shaped generations of patients and trainees through his clinical care, leadership, and mentorship. From founding the Massachusetts Poison Control System to directing the Boston Combined Residency Program, his work has helped transform pediatric care and training.

Please join us for Opening Doors: A Conversation with Dr. Frederick H. Lovejoy, Jr. – moderated by Dr. Gary Fleisher – to hear about Dr. Lovejoy's journey, his impact on pediatrics and medical education, and his reflections and advice for those forging their own paths in medicine and science.
